Round Reel Computer Tape is Available from GSA

Where do the remaining users of round reel magnetic computer tape still buy it? GSA now has under contract a company that supplies remanufactured, recertified computer tape.

Remanufactured, recertified tapes will not crack or crumble and carry a ten-year warranty, the same as for new tapes.

What is recertification? It is the process in which magnetic computer tape is remanufactured to meet and or exceed new ANSI specifications. All remanufactured computer tape should equal or exceed the original manufacturer warranty of ten years.

Older tape coming into a recertification facility is inspected by a trained technician. There are several inspection criteria. A defective metal hub, poorly rewind tape, physically damaged tape, tape without a seal, or easyload, or tapes made prior to 1994, and wet or dirty reels are all cause for rejection.

Potentially good tape is erased and moved into a cleanroom. Each reel is placed on a machine that cleans each reel twice, using a series of blades and revolving tissues. If at anytime the operator spots any physical problem, the reel is rejected. Each machine is calibrated to write and read at a predetermined signal strength. Generally, computer tape is written on and read at about 18 percent of total signal strength. By testing at 30 percent, there is a better chance of finding errors on the tape before they reach a normal computer environment.

If an errors occur, then two things will be done. The tape will be cut to make shorter reels or it can be retested a second time. If it fails a second time, it will not be recertified.

Good tape is then moved to the final rewind/cleaning station where the tape goes onto a recleaned and reinspected reel. New markers are placed on each reel. The tape is then erased a final time to eliminate any possibility of a signal being on the tape. As an adjunct to this process, initialization is available along with special packaging and colored seals.

Tapes are available in the following series: 3480, 3490, 3590, 3570, DLT, four and eight millimeter, and QIC cartridges.

Improving Quality and Reducing Cost for Laser Printers and Fax Machines

Best Practices in Digital Imaging - Regularly Scheduled Maintenance

The single best strategy, to both improve the quality of your digital imaging environment and reduce the cost of your digital document production, is to invest in regular scheduled maintenance through an annual service contract. Unlike computers, which are solid-state devices without many moving parts, laser printers and fax machines are mechanical devices, which rely on rubber rollers to transfer the paper and heated rollers under pressure to fuse the toner to the paper. Regularly maintenance of your car, with regular oil changes and periodic replacement of the rubber parts, makes your car both more reliable and last longer. Regularly scheduled maintenance of your laser printers or fax machines will make them more reliable and last longer, improving quality and reducing costs.

All printers get dirty over time. All toner cartridges leak toner and all printer/copier paper sheds. The dust builds up on the feeding and delivery rollers and begins to adhere to, and insulate, the fusing rollers. Loose dust may also obscure the laser beam and appear on the page in random locations. As a result, printers will misfeed, jam, fuse improperly, and have poor image quality. The typical response to a machine with these maladies is to buy a new one.

The simplest and most reliable way to get the most from your hardware investment and reduce the cost of your digital document production is to invest in regular scheduled maintenance. Make sure that the annual service contract includes visits for regularly scheduled maintenance. Organizations with as few as one, or as many as one thousand, printers and fax machines can reduce printer proliferation and save money while improving their digital imaging environment. Don't delay.

The LOGWORLD Expansion: Turnkey Operations and Maintenance (O & M) Services

Since the inception of the LogWorld Schedule, GSA has fielded numerous inquiries regarding turnkey O & M support services from both the private sector and Federal agencies. Should these additional services be authorized to be included in the Schedule, they would fill a critical gap and permit the full spectrum of logistical support services to be fulfilled by the LogWorld Schedule. We'll keep you posted of the status of this endeavor.

Business Cards on the Loose?

Do you have business cards scattered all over? Is it getting harder to find the contact you need with each meeting or event you attend? A phone number file keeps all your contacts in one convenient location so you have more space in your purse or wallet for important things like supermarket discount cards. Having the phone number and name of that unexpected caller at your fingertips will allow you to comfortably use his or her first name in conversation. This means you no longer need to worry about committing the faux pas of calling Brian, "Ryan" or Sharon, "Karen". In addition, you can make extensive notes on contacts in your phone number file. This is not going to work with business cards - especially those shiny ones you can't write on without the ink coming off on your hand.

There is a wide variety of phone number files available including rotary files with a turning drum-style file, 500 to 1100 cards, and 25 A to Z index cards. Index files are available with a protective see-through lid, 500 snap-in, snap-out cards and dividers, or in a cabinet space-saving design with locking cover for privacy. 7460-01-015-2239 has a Rolodex control for turning cards that holds the card in the desired position for easy reading and allows cards to be removed. The swivel file has a swivel base for easy access, 500 cards, and A to Z tabs. The V File and V File-Jr. come with 500 cards and A to Z tabbed index cards. All phone number files take Rolodex cards as refills. The NSNs listed are items available in stock.

Calendars and Planners

Do you forget scheduled meetings? Do you remember a meeting's day and time, but can't remember the room number or the building where it is being held? Or are you one of those who rely on your morning chat with co-workers to keep you in the right place at the right time? If so, you're not alone—we can help.

A calendar or planner serves as a record for your meetings and appointments as well as reminder for those who can't afford to waste time. GSA has in stock calendars and planners in a variety of sizes and styles from Day Runner, Daymax, and Franklin Covey to keep you and your staff organized. Also, JWOD calendars and planners are available that feature recycled material. Get a calendar or planner and you will see there isn't one day you don't use it. Additional appointment books, planners, calendar pads, refills, and easy to write on wall calendars are available on GSA schedule 75 II A, Office Supplies.

Since ancient times calendars have been used to record and organize business related events. The Latin word kalendae, from which the word calendar comes, was the beginning of the month when interest payments were due. Interest payments were recorded in a book called a kalendarium.

The Gregorian calendar, the primary calendar used today, can be traced back over 2,000 years to Julius Caesar who added a leap year every four years to improve the calendar's accuracy. The Gregorian calendar later improved on Caesar's Julian calendar. European countries adopted this calendar in the late 1500's, but England and her colonies did not adopt the Gregorian calendar until 1752.

Environmental Services Schedule 899-8 to the Rescue

Wherever we find, or expect to find, Unexploded Ordnance (UXO), GSA's Environmental Service Schedule vendors can provide the solution. A quick check on *GSA Advantage!*TM identifies 16 Schedule vendors capable of assisting agencies around the world.

Range Sustainability and Unexploded Ordnance Disposal are high visibility topics wherever U.S. Forces operate. From Alaska to Texas, Maine to Hawaii and Afghanistan to Zaire, on land and underwater, unexploded ordnance is a serious problem. Munitions and munitions residue pose both environmental hazards and risks to life and limb. Whether located in a stockpile, a former war zone, a former military range or an active military range, these items create several real threats.

- they create safety concern for military personnel and the public
- they are an available source for terrorist groups
- they ultimately create an environmental concern for soil and groundwater contamination

In many cases, unexploded ordnance or munitions need to be demilitarized and disposed of. Environmental Services schedule 899 vendors offer multiple methods and differing techniques, but at a minimum, each will:

- inspect 100% of the items for energetics and other waste material
- render each item totally unusable for its intended purpose, and ensures that the final product is unrecognizable as an ordnance item
- positively distinguish unprocessed and potentially dangerous items from scrap that is safe for recycling

Environmental Services 899 schedule holders are working across the U.S. and around the world to make our ranges available to our military forces and to make former war zones safe for the current residents.

To learn more about the Environmental schedule, contact the Environmental team at: environmental@gsa.gov or 1-800-241-RAIN (7246), press #1 for Schedule Programs and #3 for "Environmental." Or visit us online at fss.gsa.gov/mgmtservices.
